

As educational professionals, we want to use effective and meaningful practices to get the best possible outcomes for all our learners. The above image is one idea for a math manipulative tool kit that scaffolds and supports multiple means of representation under Universal Design for Learning.